Description Summary

Office managers work closely with the company partners, owners, or presidents to meet their company's staffing, equipment, and organizational needs. Duties may include pricing products from vendors, interviewing job applicants, managing payroll, and reimbursing members of the firm for out-of-pocket business expenses, just to name a few. An office manager must exercise sound judgment every day, and you could be part of that decision-making by presenting these managers with offers and promotions that are specific to what they are looking for. Segment by industry type and more, to find your perfect target audience for your next marketing campaign!
